Nesma Holding Among Top 50 Companies in the Middle East for 2018

Middle East
Forbes

Nesma Holding was ranked by Forbes Middle East as the 29th biggest private company in the Arab world among 50 other companies. Other notable Saudi companies on the list were Abdul Latif Jameel, Olayan Group, Zamil Group Holding and Alzahid Group.

To rank the 50 biggest private companies in the Arab world, Forbes sent out questionnaires to the companies and collected information from company websites, official LinkedIn profiles as well as a number of other research reports.

The criteria that Forbes ranked the companies based on, includes number of employees, number of sectors that the business operates in, number of countries that the company operates in, transparency and the company age.

Nesma High Training Institute: Where Knowledge and Skills are Acquired

Nesma High Training Institute (NHTI) was established in 2011 as a vocational training institute dedicated to the professional technical training of young Saudi job seekers. NHTI provides intensive programs in a variety of construction-related fields.

In 2016, NHTI became an Aramco approved training institute and part of Aramco's training capacity. Since its inception, NHTI has graduated over 4000 Saudi vocational staff helping them to be placed into construction industry jobs and careers in Saudi Arabia.

NHTI training programs and curriculums focus on preparing trainees for day-to-day duties in their technical positions upon successful completion of their programs. Emphasis is placed on specific skills required or certified in each particular career. The institute's courses are based on a theoretical and practical learning in construction and include health and safety, HVAC, welding, pipefitting, scaffolding, plumbing, painting, warehousing, rough carpentry and office management among others.

Located in Dammam, the institute's building includes ten workshops, 14 classrooms, an IT lab, an admin building, auditorium, cafeteria, clinic, recreation hall, prayer room, parking lots, instructors and clients offices.

Emad Mugharbel, Nesma High Training Institute CEO, hopes for NHTI to expand its branches across the Saudi cities and to become a standard Saudi institute for vocational training in alignment with Nesma & Partners' vision and the country's 2030 vision.
